Cells in milk and milk-derived products are commonly isolated and cultivated in the laboratory for purposes of research, production of products and reagents for clinical use, and for therapeutic use. One popular laboratory technique for cell cultivation involves seeding cells into vessels in a selective growth medium and culturing the cells for the desired period of time. This technique is used, for example, for culturing cells of interest, for growing cells needed for screening tests for drug and drug metabolite, and for growing primary cells for use in cell transformation and immunization procedures. So instead # of starting it (and giving it a substantial amount of time to finish) # when the system is already dirty, we check that there are no new devices # in the state D-state and that we are not in a state which implies that # a device has been added while the system was dirty. # # See also test-run-grace.sh # # Copyright (C) 2014 Andreas Bießmann # # This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify # it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by # the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or # (at your option) any later version. # # This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, # but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of # MER 6d1f23a050
